Deaths From Blizzard Have Reached 33

By The Associated Press

The Great Plains area still is digging out of snow drifts as high as house-tops today.

Deaths in the weekend blizzard rose to 33, spread over nine states.

Texas 7, Illinois 7, Oklahoma 5, Kansas 4, Nebraska 3, Indiana 3, Missouri 2, New Mexico 1 and Iowa 1.

Sixteen of the deaths were attributed to traffic accidents in which the storm was a factor. The other 17 included seven deaths of exposure, six were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes in stalled cars and four who died of heart attacks from exertion.

Communications and travel on roads and rail lines still were snarled.

Rescue operations began yesterday as skies cleared behind the storm, which veered northeastward toward the Great Lakes, partially spent but still potent.

A huge task faced rescuers. Hundreds of small communities across the desolate plains had been isolated since Saturday.

Despite their own plight, inhabitants of the area threw open their doors to refugees of the storm. Several towns were crowded with them. Farm homes welcomed motorists seeking safety.

Snoround cars by the hundreds were counted from the air yesterday over the six-state high plains area — eastern New Mexico and Colorado, the Panhandles of Texas and Oklahoma, western Kansas and Nebraska.

Rescuers believe more dead would be uncovered as the heavy snow thawed.

Food and supplies were dropped from the air carried to disaster victims Volunteer Red Cross workers in the Texas Panhandle used snowshoes and skis. Military helicopters picked up the frail and the needy and flew them to the nearest town or hospital.

School buses removed approximately 400 passengers from two cross-country streamliners stuck in the snow in western Kansas.

Beck Refuses to Answer Senate Probers

By HERBERT FOSTER AND JOHN A. GOLDSMITH

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Teamsters Boss Dave Beck refused on grounds of possible self-incrimination today to answer charges that he may have misappropriated $320,000 in union funds.

The portly chief of the nation's largest union refused on constitutional grounds to give his personal records to the Senate Rackets committee. He also refused for the same reasons to answer questions about his financial dealings with the union.

In a loud, high-pitched voice Beck said with no sign of embarrassment — that letting the committee look into his records might very definitely tend to incriminate him.

Beck's use of the Fifth Amendment's protection in defiance of the committee drew a quick response from the AFL-CIO with which the Teamsters union is affiliated.

AFL-CIO President George Meany summoned the federation's 29-member executive council, to which Beck belongs, to an extraordinary meeting here on Friday. The AFL-CIO recently declared in a policy statement that no union official who invokes the Fifth Amendment is fit to serve and should be ousted.

In the course of his defiance of the committee Beck shouted that he has no intention of resigning. He also asserted that he is not bound by the AFL-CIO's code of ethics and is totally opposed to it.

Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark) opened Beck's long deferred appearance with a statement that the committee had information the refund and pink faced teamsters chief may have misappropriated $320,000 in union money.

McClellan said this money was neither a gift nor a loan to Beck, according to the committee's information.

Beck didn't deny or confirm the charge. He started out by challenging the committee's authority to judge criminal practices or activities and went on from there to refuse to give any information about his finances.

The marble-pillared Senate hearing room was jammed with spectators who found Beck's performance fascinating and whose presence in turn seemed to stimulate Beck. He permitted himself to grin now and then when his remarks evoked audience laughter.

In invoking his constitutional privileges not to give information about himself, Beck repeatedly said he was acting on the advice of his chief counsel — former Sen. James H. Duff (R-Pa.). He said it.

House Rejects Feilds' Motion on Sales Tax

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas House today turned down a proposal to extend the special legislative session.

Rep. Talbot Feild of Hempstead County asked for the extension in order to set up what he termed a more equitable collection bracket for the 3 per cent sales tax.

A present, the point at which merchants start collecting the tax is set by the revenue commissioner. Feild charged that under the present system collections run almost 7 per cent on low cost items.

He declared that this is illegal in violation of the intent of the General Assembly.

Seventy representatives voted against Feild's resolution and 19 voted for it.

The resolution provided that in case the Legislature did not establish a different sales tax collection method, the commissioner be directed to provide for the issuance of tokens.

Three other House members attempted to introduce resolutions, but were ruled out of order by Speaker Glen Waddell of Little Rock.

The House brought up could not be considered during the special session.

Students to Compete for Kiwanis Queen

Students from both junior and senior high schools are competing for the honor of Kiwanis Queen at this year's 15th annual minstrel show, opening Thursday night at Hope High School auditorium.

Two queens will be selected, one from junior high and the other from senior high. Winners will be determined by candidates selling the greatest number of tickets.

Junior high candidates are: Tena Pilkinton, Jane Reinhardt, Alene Watson, Dorothy Smith, Sue Ann Smith and Kay Downing.

Senior high candidates are: Sandra Hobbs, Sara Ellis, Bevelyn Ball, Glenda Hawley, Mary Margaret Dameron, and Bobbie Rae Garrett.

The junior queen will be crowned Thursday night, and the senior queen Friday night. Tickets went on sale last week, and Chairman Jack Lowe said a large number had already been sold.

Annual proceeds from the minstrel show goes for promotion activities at Hope Youth Center and for improvements and betterments at K-Park.

According to Teddy Jones, Kiwanis club secretary, more than $12,000 has been spent on the Youth Program in the past ten years.

K-Park, where "Little League" baseball is played throughout the summer months, originally cost $4,000. In three years the indebtedness was cleared by proceeds from minstrel shows. Approximately $2500 has been spent for improvements.

Mayor's Proclamation Calls for Vote on City Manager Plan April 23

Legislature Approves Highway Appropriation

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Both houses of the Arkansas Legislature today passed their own versions of the 164-million-dollar compromise highway appropriation bill.

The actions increased belief that one or both measures may clear through the Legislature tomorrow — the earliest possible day for adjournment of the special session which got under way yesterday.

The only difference in the two bills is that the Senate measure was amended yesterday to include a $25,000 appropriation for acquisition and operation as a free ferry of a toll ferry now operated at Tontahock on the Arkansas River between Perry and Faulkner counties.

When it finally got around to it, the House passed its own highway appropriation bill 91-0 but a sometimes bitter fight developed over the customarily routine second reading of the Senate bill containing the Tontahock allotment.

After much parliamentary maneuvering and several votes, the House finally heard the bill read the second time—which means it may act on the measure tomorrow.

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Striving for quick adjournment of a special session, the Arkansas Legislature got ready to pass compromise highway appropriation bills today after rejecting 14 proposed amendments.

The House turned down 11 amendments yesterday. The Senate rejected three and clipped on a minor amendment to its identical 104-million-dollar appropriations bill.

Each house today was in position to pass its own measure. If this were done final action could be taken tomorrow.

The special session became necessary when the Legislature adjourned two weeks ago without passing the highway bill, thereby leaving the Highway Department without operating funds after June 30.

In a speech to a joint meeting of the House and Senate yesterday Gov. Orval Faubus accused the Highway Department of favoritism, discrimination and administrative malfunction.

Then he asked for approval of a compromise highway bill.

Highway Commission Chairman Glenn Wallace of Nashville commented afterwards that he knew of no discrimination and favoritism in the Highway Department.

Vice Chairman Cecil Lynch of Pine Bluff said wage differentials, cited as a sore point by Faubus, were part of business methods in operating the Highway Department.

Commissioner Jim Crain of Wilson, appointed by Faubus, said that Highway Director Herbert Eldridge has operated strictly on his own and I don't know what Eldridge has done.

Eldridge declined to comment on Faubus' speech.

The governor did not say whom he considered responsible for conditions he said existed.

After Faubus' speech both houses got down to business. A majority of the House apparently indicated it favored passing the compromise bill exactly as approved by the Joint Budget Committee last week.

First it defeated a proposed amendment to increase the hourly rate for motor patrol operators.

Senate Turns to Water Projects Bill

By GORDON BROWN

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate was due to turn its attention today to a bill — virtually identical to one which President Eisenhower vetoed last year—which would authorize future appropriations of 1 1/2 billion dollars for various water projects.

As cleared for the Senate by its Public Works Committee, the bill would authorize appropriations totaling $1,521,554,000 for some 105 navigation, flood control, hydroelectric and beach erosion projects in virtually all states.

Authorizations in last year's bill were about 150 million dollars more than the total in the new measure.

But for the most part, the bill before the Senate was virtually identical to the one passed last year.

2 Important Cotton Meets Slated Here

Two important cotton meetings will be held in Hope Wednesday. At 10 o'clock cotton growers will consider yield per acre, while at 1:30 in the afternoon consideration will be given to the building practices will be the theme.

The two meetings to be held in the Hope City Hall are under the direction of County Agent Oliver L. Adams. University of Arkansas Soils Specialist Woody Miller and County AGO Office Manager Cecil Guthrie will lead the discussions.

This year, Hempstead County cotton producers have 7,457 acres that may be planted to cotton and 4,200 cotton acres in the Reserve of the Soil Bank Program for which a payment of $181,561.60 will be received.

Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, Soils Specialist Miller will discuss and answer questions regarding Fertilization of the 1937 cotton acres according to the needs of the individual fields, fertilizer placement and timing and other essential soil practices pertaining to cotton. Many cotton producers believe and find the above practices a practical method of increasing economical yields per acre.

Wednesday afternoon at 1:30, Mr. Miller and Mr. Guthrie will discuss soil improvement practices that the AGC may make payment of assistance toward carrying forward. As an example, a report shows "corn yields jumped 40 per cent in Arkansas following a plowed under crop of soybeans and cotton yield went up 40 per cent in Mississippi." Leaving the land idle may actually bring about soil deterioration by erosion, encroaching weeds and insect infestation. Soils Specialist Miller will give some practical tips that will assist cotton growers in production on their own land.

Arkansas AGC, Mr. Guthrie, will discuss the various soil improvement practices that will assist cotton growers in production on their own land. The purpose of these meetings is to set up a platform for the county and town delegates to the state and county conventions.

Hempstead Grand Jury Served 52 Years Ago

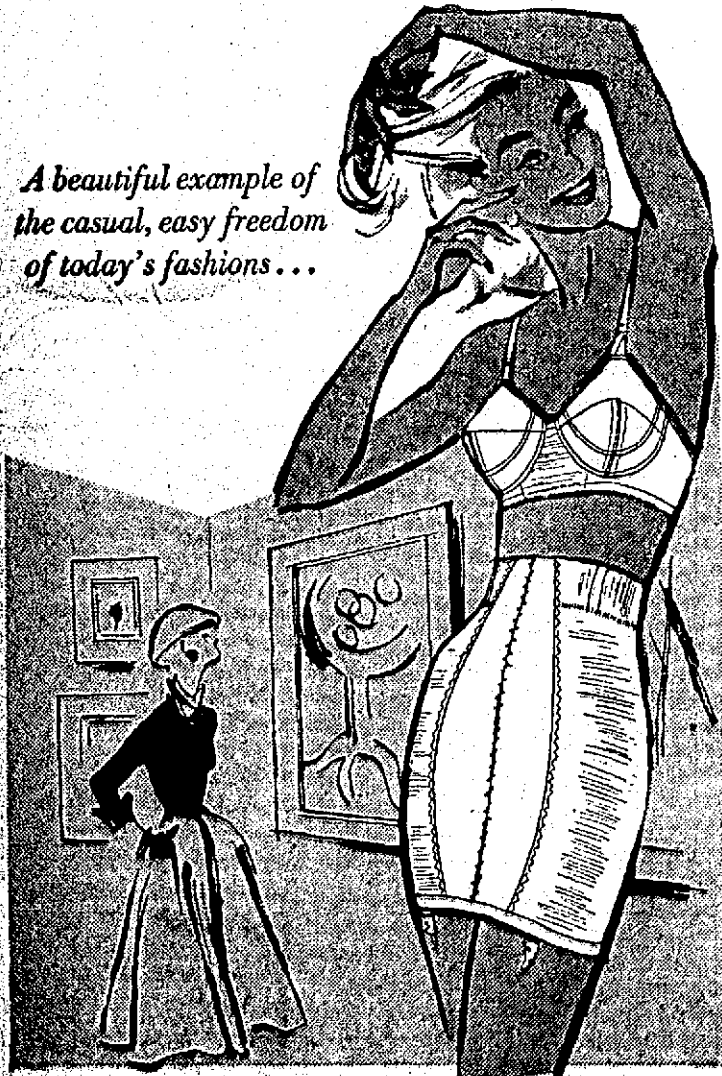

Living in Debt Is American Way of Life

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—That living in debt is a way of life for an increasing number of Americans is official today. A government agency study group says so. And it thinks the habit will go on spreading.

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—That restless creator, Walt Disney, isn't resting on his laurels at Disneyland. He has millions of dollars' worth of new features for the fabulous park on his drawing boards. Walt gave me a preview of his ambitious plans at his Burbank studios. He showed models and sketches of such features as Liberty Square, reproductions of the Republic I'm trying to interest big companies to sponsor it, before. Disneyland already is a vastly Thomas Edison Place, showing successful enterprise. So the won-how American living has progressed because of the great inventors spurring of science... A reproduction of New Orleans' French Quarter, including a fantastic haunted house complete with ghosts, sliding panels, etc. I'm told I'm not supposed to scare the public, but shucks people like to be scared... An 1812 sailing vessel to ply the rivers of America, along with the paddlewheel Mark Twain... A 300-foot painting of the grand canyon to be viewed from the Disneyland railroad... Big projects in Tomorrowland, including a protozoa rite that would take patrons into a drop of water as seen through a microscope... There's a great urgency today to interest young people in science as a profession... Disneyland already is a vastly Thomas Edison Place, showing successful enterprise. So the wonder is, why add to success? I asked Disney what would happen if he left the park as is. You sound like my bankers, he laughed. But he added seriously? My idea when I built the place was that it wouldn't be a static affair, but would give us a chance to be constantly creative. That's the fun in something like this: having the chance to make it grow. There's another reason The percentage of local visitors is high. The park must count heavily on the repeat trade. I don't want anyone to say they're not going back to Disneyland because they've seen everything, Disney remarked.

the same as the one Eisenhower turned down last summer. It carries half a dozen more projects than the 1956 bill — and only on project which was in the 1956 measure is missing from the new bill.

In vetoing the bill last year the President voiced three main objections.

First, he said that Army Engineer reports on some 32 projects had not been submitted to departmental agencies and to Congress as required; second, he said some projects should be reexamined with a view of requiring local interests to pay a bigger share of the cost; and third, he said half a dozen projects shouldn't be authorized.

Chairman Chavez (D-NM) of the committee said that most of the Army Engineer reports now have cleared Congress or will in the near future.

The committee made no major change in the requirements of local contribution for any project.

These projects, which the President opposed, remained in the bill: Gilbert and Lone Rock Reservoirs, Ark., $57,300,000; Elm River, S.D., $1,750,000; Hall Meadow Dam, Conn., $2,420,000; East Branch Dam, Conn., $2,070,000; Bruce Eddy, Idaho, $23,000,000.

The committee achieve a reduction in overall authorization chiefly by trimming the amount for the Lower Mississippi River from 219 million dollars last year to 75 million dollars this year. Army engineers had said they have sufficient authorization now to operate for a few years.

British Try to End Strike of Millions

LONDON (AP) — Britain's government today dined its hopes of ending a strike by 1,220,000 industrial and shipyard workers on a public court of inquiry.

Labor Minister Ian Macleod decided to appoint the court after wage talks broke down between Macleod and union leaders who walked out 11 days ago. The strike has halted work on 300 vessels under construction.

Macleod appealed to union chiefs to call off their stoppages while the inquiry goes on. The leaders promised to report the request to their executive committee as Macleod assured them the inquiry tribunal would go to work with a minimum of delay.

The findings of government-appointed inquiry courts are not binding on either side. The findings carry considerable weight with the British public, however, and such courts have proved useful in tackling many stubborn labor disputes.

Efforts to end the allied strike by a million industrial engineering workers were relegated to the background since the shipyard dispute was believed the key to both strikes. The government hopes a wage settlement in the shipyards will set a pattern for the engineering workers. Both groups of strikers belong to the same complex of unions.

of the history contest were Mary Bratton of the sixth grade and Andy Bemis of the fifth grade.

Reports of the state conference held in El Dorado were given by Mrs. O. G. Hirst, Mrs. J. W. Teeter, Mrs. J. B. Hesterly and Mrs. C. A. Haynes.

Mrs. Allen Gee presented the program for the afternoon on "Study on Historical Events."

The meeting closed with silent prayer for one of the chapter's beloved members, Mrs. C. C. McRae, Jr., who is seriously ill.

A dainty dessert course was served to the thirteen members.

Can't Tell About Ike Physically

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to judge President Eisenhower's physical condition at pictures of him — or looking a picture of him — is a tricky business and so far has not proved anything.

For weeks Eisenhower has been troubled by a cough. On March 12 doctors at Walter Reed Hospital checked him over. The next day the President told reporters the doctors thought he was in quite good shape from their standpoint.

At times in recent weeks some newsmen who have seen Eisenhower closeup thought he looked tired. Others, seeing him at the same time, thought he looked excellent. Some recent pictures make him look tired. In others he looks fine.

Last week his appointments secretary, Bernard M. Shanley, in a speech mainly devoted to the Supreme Court, mentioned Eisenhower in a way that emphasized his tiredness and compared the President of three years ago and today.

It is impossible, said Shanley, for the President to do the things he did three years ago. I have seen the President so tired he has rested his head on his hands.

In a talk to the nation Feb. 20,

1956 — five months after his heart attack and announcing he would seek a second term — Eisenhower made it clear that if re-elected he would have to cut down on some of the activities he had indulged in before his heart attack.

He said: Some of the things in which I can properly have a reduced schedule include public speeches, office appointments with individual and groups, ceremonial dinners, receptions and portions of a very heavy correspondence.

A week later Eisenhower, denying Democratic complaints that he was already a part-time president, said that if the time ever came when he didn't feel fit to carry out his duties he would inform the people immediately.

An Associated Press reporter regularly assigned to the White House for years, says that so far as he can determine Eisenhower is working as long hours as ever.

But he also says he never saw Eisenhower looking better than he did the day before his heart attack Sept. 24, 1955, and the night before his stomach attack last summer.

One reporter who was with Eisenhower at his Bermuda meeting with British Prime Minister Macmillan last week said later the President seemed to him tired around the eyes when he boarded his plane Sunday to return home.

Another reporter, meeting Eisenhower when he got off that plane here, wrote that the President looked tan and fit. The picture accompanying that story seemed to show the President looking fit.

But other newsmen who met that same plane thought the President looked quite fatigued. James Hagerty, Eisenhower's press secretary, was told of this yesterday. He said he thought all those who took part in the Bermuda conference felt a little tired afterwards. Outside of that, Hagerty said, Eisenhower was feeling fine.

One press photographer who followed Eisenhower around Bermuda later said the President coughed frequently there, holding

91 Unexpected Guests for a Weekend

CLARENDON, Tex. (AP) — The Andy Brown family said goodbye yesterday to 91 unexpected weekend guests who were sheltered from a howling blizzard in their seven-room farmhouse.

The guest list included 43 passengers from two Greyhound buses bound for California from Oklahoma. 37 motorists and 11 truck drivers. All made their way to the twinkling lights of the Brown home after the spring storm blocked roads in the area with insurmountable drifts. The farm is located about 17 miles north of Clarendon on U. S. Highway 70.

They were wonderful. Mrs. Dorothy Evans of Chicago said of the Browns.

She said the family had no sleep from Saturday until the handkerchief to his mouth and pressing his chest.

He also said that Eisenhower — during a half hour of hitting golf balls around with Hagerty at Bermuda — sat down on the ground three or four times to rest.

Yesterday morning Hagerty said that during Eisenhower's leisurely voyage to Bermuda and his stay there he had shaken off a head cold and car trouble but still had an occasional cough.

Yet yesterday afternoon Sen. Jennings (D-Mo) after attending Eisenhower's White House conference with congressional leaders, said the President looked fit, did not appear to be hoarse, and did not cough during the hour and 20 minutes he spent with the senators and representatives.

Secretary of State Dulles was reported to have done most of the talking with the Congress members because, at the star, Eisenhower said his voice was not up to a lengthy discussion.

They didn't have time. Mrs. Evans said. Mrs. Brown was busy cooking all the time and Andy was always needed to help someone in trouble. They were wonderful.

Pretty Mrs. Melba Brown — slender and with prematurely gray hair — brushed herself today serving cup cakes and cookies as an in-between snack. She also whipped up a corn goulash for lunch.

The Browns — Andy, Melba and their children, David and Linda, and Andy's uncle, George Shoop — opened their doors, their larder and even relinquished their warm beds to the cold and weary men and women.

The first rescue force from McLean, Tex., broke through the drifts about noon. A second unit made it from Clarendon.

Some 30 men moved to the heated concrete-block barn just behind the house.

Mrs. Brown and the women prepared food and coffee flowed by the barrel until the supply gave out. Cigarettes were next to go but eggs, bacon, flour, corn and other items held out until the end.

Asked how they amused themselves, most answered, We slept.

The house had only one bathroom and the Browns said the line sometimes numbered 20 waiters. Children and adults rotated in shifts for a few winks on the beds and some adults were forced to stand because of limited floor space.

Hale and hearty, although weary, the guests began leaving after the National Guard unit from McLean broke through with much needed supplies.

They took up a collection of $170 as a small measure of our thanks," as one woman said to Mrs. Brown.

Bowling was introduced into North American by the Dutch.

Pilot Film Necessary But Costly

By CHARLES MERGER

NEW YORK (U. I.)—If you have an idea for a regular television program you must make a pilot film in order for anyone to take your idea seriously. But that doesn't mean, of course, that anyone will buy it.

It is estimated that of every 20 pilot films made, only one reaches the home screen as a regular TV program. Its a big gamble—and an expensive one.

Production cost of a pilot film is usually about $40,000. That is the approximate cost of a pilot recently completed in New York by the producing team of Norman Frank and Stanley Niss. Tentatively entitled "U. F. 61," it will be (they hope) a series about the activities of a mythical New York detective squad. The word is that ABC-TV is definitely interested in the series.

Frank and Niss pondered and planned the series on and off for four years before taking the big gamble of actually producing a pilot. Because a successful pilot theoretically must be better than 10 other pilots, they collected a first-rate production staff and cast.

For a director they chose Frank Schaffner, as cinematographer, Burt Conner, as musical director, Alfredo Antonini, James Gregory was picked to play the role of the central character, Lt. Bernard J. Savage. About half the footage for the proposed series will be done on location.

Various television series have shown detectives based in a central police headquarters assigned to homicide one week, narcotics another, and so through various types of crime. Frank, a stickler for authenticity, insists that it is done that way in actual police headquarters practice. But precinct detectives do have more versatile roles.

So he invented the 12th New York precinct as the dramatic background for Lt. Savage and his fellow policemen. The projected series does not seek to take stories from New York police files (which have been sealed as a source to TV programs anyway). It did hire a police consultant for the pilot film to assure complete authenticity of detail. The consultant only criticism was that one actor needed a haircut before he could portray a cop.

DOROTHY DIX

She Never Grew Up — and Mama's to Blame

Dear Dorothy Dix: My daughter-in-law, Miriam, had never had a party at home, or attended one outside. She had never had a date, had only one girl friend, and had never been away from her mother for a single night. When she met my son, they had a whirlwind courtship (out of sight of her mother), and married as he was about to go into service. He wants her to go with him, naturally, but she has refused, saying that if he insists on her leaving her mother, she'll have to ask for a divorce. Have you any ideas on how Miriam can be brought to face reality?

Dear P. M.: It's a shattering thing to watch a mother deliberately ruin a child's life by making him so dependant on maternal care that the outside world holds nothing but a frightening strangeness. This concept of parenthood is all wrong. Parents have a duty to raise their boys and girls to be mature, right-thinking adults, who in turn, can face their responsibilities without shirking.

Your daughter-in-law's family made a perfect mess of the job. The girl cannot be changed overnight, or in a week or month. It would take a long period of readjustment, with her mother aiding, not obstructing, the change. Psychological treatment would probably be necessary.

Under present conditions, with your son too distant to offer encouragement and the girl content to be back with mother, it's doubtful if success will ever come of the marriage.

Dear Dorothy Dix: For 12 years I have been in love with Baker and have finally faced the fact that he doesn't and never will love me. Should I stop loving him?

BEVERLY
Dear Beverly: Better late than never! A hopeless love may be romantic in novels, but it's mighty cold comfort in real life.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My fiancé and I are each 28. Since we are of age, should we pay for our own wedding?

UNDINE
Dear Undine: Traditionally, the girls parents foot the wedding bills, but circumstances can alter cases. If your folks are unwilling or unable to take on the expense, and you feel you can handle it, by all means do so. Make it a simple affair and nobody's bank balance need be seriously affected.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My son, who works in another state, has become engaged to a high-school senior there. Recently she sent me a picture of herself, by him, I sent my thanks to her when he went back. Should I have sent her a personal note of thanks?

MRS. A. F.
Dear Mrs. A. F.: I should think you would have welcomed the opportunity to write and become better acquainted with your future daughter-in-law. As a matter of fact, you should written her when the engagement was announced. Do so, without further delay, and send a gift for her graduation with a note of affectionate congratulation.

UN Secretary Winding Up Cairo Mission

CAIRO (U. I.)—U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld today was winding up his latest Cairo mission with no sign of any major change in Egypt's stand on the Middle East deadlocks.

Egyptian informants said President Nasser's government may make some slight concessions to big Western users of the Suez Canal. But they said Hammarskjöld had run into a dead end in his efforts to get formal agreement from Nasser that U. N. troops could stay indefinitely in the Gaza Strip as a barrier against renewed violence.

The secretary general held what was expected to be his last talk with Nasser last night. He plans to leave for New York tomorrow. Egyptian officials and the Egyptian press sought to give the impression a general agreement was imminent on the Suez Canal dispute, but Western diplomats were skeptical. U. N. sources emphasized that Hammarskjöld is here only as a mediator.

Nasser is expected to announce next week his plans for the future operation of the vital waterway, plans the outlined to Hammarskjöld during his visit.

TV Writer Wants Say on Scrip Changes

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK — Although it's a couple of years since paddy Chayefsky wrote a television drama, he is general recognized as our leading TV dramatist. The reason is ironic.

Chayefsky has had greater success than other TV writers in transforming his television dramas into motion pictures and the theater. His "Marty" was both a prize-winning movie and a box office hit. His "Middle of the Night" was the first, for a long time, the only TV property to make it as a play on Broadway. Trade publication reviews in advance of next month's opening of his TV-based movie, "Bachelor Party," are — as they say in the trade — raves.

This happy state of affairs has resulted in Chayefsky being a widely discussed American writer. You hear, for example, that he is (A) never going to write for TV again, (B) demanding huge sums for scripts, (C) going to write a series about a psychiatrist or something.

Chayefsky, 34, a genial, stocky, meticulous craftsman, a doting parent and quiet citizen, is baffled by all this hollabaloo. He said the other day:

(A) Of course I'm not through with television. An hour TV drama is perfect for my kind of thinking. In writing I'm a short story thinker, not a novel type of thinker. But it will be a while before I can get back to it. Right now I'm working on my first original movie script, which is tentatively titled "The God Dess," and after that I'm going to do a movie adaptation of "Middle of the Night."

(B) I don't know who started that rumor about my wanting a big fat fee to do a TV script. I don't want a cent more than the prevailing script rate. But I do want absolute guarantee that no body can tamper with my script. I want the right of consultation on casting.

(C) After I've finished the

No Trace of Plane With 67 Aboard

TOKYO. — (UP) — Planes and ships criss - crossed the Pacific off Japan for the fourth day today in a fruitless search for a C-97 transport plane which disappeared Friday with 67 Americans aboard.

Search planes and ships found white kapok pillows, "yellow objects and other articles in the shark - infested waters, but none of them were from the Stratocruiser which plummeted into the sea on a flight from California to Japan.

Cloudy skies and rain squalls brought the search practically to a halt yesterday, but skies cleared today and the Air Force ordered out all the planes available on the chance there might be survivors bobbing about on life rafts.

Many air officers believed the plane cracked up and sank in the turbulent seas raging when it disappeared, but the Air Force said it would continue the search until all hope was gone.

Bank Guard Becomes Hero Overnight

By ALFRED LEECH

CHICAGO. — (UP) — Big Ed Vyzral found himself a hero overnight but for Ed, it was a sleepless night.

Killing a man is no way to gain fame, he said in his Irish brogue. I didn't sleep a wink the night after it happened.

It was during the non rush when the bandit walked up to the cashiers' cage of Mrs. Mary Merritt, 21, in the Chicago Federal Savings and Loan office. The downtown office was jammed.

Ed Vyzral, 63, was on duty as a guard. Hands folded, he smiled his Irish smile at old customers.

Before he retired and took the guard job three years ago, Big Ed had been a Chicago policeman for 30 years. And he never had to fire a shot in anger.

But when the time came he made it count.

Thomas Maley, first floor manager, spotted Mary Merritt's silent alarm light signal and strode over to Vyzral.

"I think there's a holdup at Cage 9," he said.

When I got there Mary was smiling a big, wide smile. Ed said. So I figured it was no hold-up.

rapped the guy on the shoulder and asked, "What's going on here?" He turned and fired twice. Both times the gun misfired, and by the grace of the good Lord I'm alive today.

Maybe Ed should have approached with his gun drawn, but there were two women at a stamp machine behind the bandit, directly in Ed's line of fire.

I backed away and ducked behind a post, Vyzral said. The guy duck behind a counter. I fired two wild shots on purpose, hoping to scare him. I hollered, "why don't you give up?"

I didn't fire any more because each round you waste you're closer to death.

Then the guy leaned out with movie adaptation of "Middle of the Night" I plan to start on a dramatic series. It will be live and have the cooperation of the American Psychiatric Association. Maybe that's how the rumor got started I was going to write about a psychiatrist or something That's not true. The theme of the series will be the problems of man in our current society.

HOME AGAIN — Rod McKuen's looks are described as the Huck Finn type and, if all his diverse talents blossom, his name may become as familiar. The actor - composer - poet - singer is making his Hollywood debut in "Rock, Pretty Baby," but he's had lots of entertainment experience and success during his Army hitch in the Far East.

NIPPON - NICE — This new hair ornament, a brightly lacquered ribbon, is in harmony with the Oriental look featured in the Castillo-Larvin collection of spring styles in Paris. It was inspired by the wigs worn by Japanese Samurai warriors.

NOT SGT. FRIDAY — This scowling face under the Marine hat belongs to ordinarily mild-mannered Jack Webb, the Sergeant Friday of television's "Dragnet." Jack's starring in "The D.I.," a movie about a Marine drill instructor. The film will show Webb Marine training, Jack says, but will reflect nothing but credit on the Leathernecks.

IN MIDDLE

EAST JORDAN, Mich. (UP) — Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Arnold can vote in Charlevoix County as long as they don't move their bed.

The Arnold home is built on an imaginary line dividing Charlevoix and Antrim counties. The couple casts in Antrim county, sleeps in Charlevoix county and pays taxes in both.

Under state law, the Arnolds vote in the county in which they sleep.

POLICE HAD BEER

MUSKEGON, Mich. (UP) — Police didn't have to look far when Charles Farr reported someone had stolen two cases of beer he had left on the sidewalk outside a tavern.

The beer had been taken to police headquarters by two cruising patrolmen.

his gun in his hand to take a shot. I hit him in the shoulder and there was a funny look on his face. He fell and I fired two more, one in the chest and one in the head.

I wasn't scared. But when it was over, my knees were a little shaky. And the thought of killing a man made me a little sick, but thank God I didn't kill an innocent bystander.

Ed, a genial giant of a man, was always thinking of the by-standers during the 30 years he was a traffic cop and something of a landmark on that same downtown corner.

Once he saved a deaf woman from being run down by a fire truck. Another time he caught a bandit without drawing his pistol.

Now he was a real hero. His phone jangled until midnight. Old police buddies and important people calling to congratulate. But Ed's wife wept.

It could have been you, she said.

And Ed didn't sleep a wink. It's no way to gain fame, he said.

Finds Not All Hungarian Actresses Are Madcaps

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (UP)—The only time Eva Bartok acts like a Hungarian actress is when people tell her in surprise. Why, you don't act at all like a Hungarian actress.

That remark causes the slender, dark-eyed star, who was born in Budapest, to blow up a real team peramental storm.

One Hollywood writer said I was very unusual Hungarian actress because I wasn't blonde, didn't mangle the English language, and was quiet," she fumed.

What did they expect me to do-break up all the studio furniture?

Miss Bartok, who twinkles brightly in the European celluloid sky, recently completed her first American film—an M. G. M. opus called "Ten Thousand Bedrooms" in which she stars with Dean Martin.

It is a nice clean comedy and has nothing to do with bedrooms," she said. All she did was act in the picture. Somebody else gave it the title.

Miss Bartok, although she came here to make a single picture, has signed up for another, and is contemplating a TV series that will inevitably be known as "Forever Eva."

And tell the story of a young Hungarian girl's struggles in this country.

Eva hopes that meanwhile she can clear up the misconception that Hungarians are a madcap, haramscaram bunch of foolloose Bohemians.

She feels that this slander on her people has been given currency by playwright Ferenc Molnar's jest that, "Anyone who has a Hungarian for a friend, doesn't need an enemy."

"Molnar shouldn't have said that," she remarked. Anyway, it is just his version of an old Hungarian joke about Romanians, which every Hungarian school child knows.

We have another schoolboy joke about what is the difference between a Romanian and a Czechoslovak. The answer is that each if them would agree to sell his mother—but only the Romanian would make delivery.

Asked to define the actual virtues and defects of Hungarians, Eva, who is now a British subject, said:

People are individuals, and I hate to generalize. But most Hungarians are generous, talented, love foreigners, and have a good sense of humor. But because they have known long hardship their jokes are weary—it is a gallows humor.

On the bad side, Hungarians, particularly in Budapest, are inclined to be sophisticated and cynical and sometimes are a bit — how do you say it — two-faced?

But this is because of Hungary's geographical position. They must say things that will please her neighbors on all sides.

Eva, who is intense and brooding, is suspicious of quick success and believes talent must always fight hard to find its place.

After going to London in 1948, she said, I had to wait two years before I could get a work permit, and five more years before I got a real part in a good play.

She likes to read, listen to music, paint, swim and ski.

But I don't like to go to prize fights or bullfights," she continued. "I don't like violence of any kind, and I don't like gambling. I don't like small talk either, because it seems to me it consists mostly of trading little lies back and forth.

"You can see that makes me an outcast in modern society."

She has no opinions about American men because, as she pointed out, all she has met is Hollywood men and she isn't sure they are typical.

"I think Hollywood women are more intelligent than Hollywood men," she said, smiling, "and they tell me Hollywood men are spelled, because too many women make over them.

"I am old-fashioned myself. I think the man should show the initiative—at least at the start. "I spent five months in Hollywood as a bachelor girl, and my name wasn't linked with anyone. Not even one romance!"

"Don't you think for this I deserve at least an oscar?"

Mouse-like short-tailed shrews, found in the eastern United States eat two and three times their weight in one day.

Restoration of Dewey's Ship Near

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Crucier Olympia Association, Inc., said today it has almost won three years' struggle to restore Adm. Dewey's flagship at Manila Bay to a condition where it can be exhibited as a public memorial.

The Navy had set certain repair standards to make the ship safe for visitors and estimated these repairs would cost $250,000. Francis D. Pasorius, association president, said a Philadelphia firm had offered to repair and alter the ship for $168,000.

The funds said Pasorius, will be raised by the association.

The Olympia began her naval career in 1895. She was taken out of commission in 1922 and is now at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, in such condition that public visiting is prohibited.

LEGAL NOTICE

An ordinance has been introduced by the City Council of the City of Hope, Arkansas, providing for the assessment and collection of a sewer maintenance fee and a connection fee, said maintenance fee to be a monthly fee in an amount equal to 25% of each user of our sewer's average water bill during the months of November, December and January; and the connection fee so provided is $50.00 for each connection to the Hope Sewer System.

All persons desiring to be heard on these matters may be heard at 7 P. M. on April 16, 1957 in the Council Room at the City Hall in Hope, Arkansas.

Mrs. Chas. F. Reynerson
City Clerk

One of the most sought after of stars, she is turning down all offers just to remain with her husband.

I don't plan to go to work until next November, when I'll do 'The Nunn's Story,' she remarked. These six months I'll be able to spend with Mel, and I feel that's very important.

Acting is important to me, and probably always will be. But marriage means more. And to make a marriage work, you have to make certain concessions. You can't be working all the time.

People don't realize there must be more giving than taking in a marriage. You can never take more than you give if both people are to be happy.

The Dutchborn actress made these remarks in her BelAir Hotel suite. The Ferrers were there briefly before taking off for Mexico, where he will make 'The Sun Also Rises.'

Packing, packing, packing, Audrey exclaimed. That seems to be all I do.

I asked her just where is home. Unfortunately, we don't know, she replied. Mels children are here, so there are certain ties. I was brought up in Europe. We love

Orioles to Count on Its Hurlers

By JERRY LISKA
SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles, who finished sixth in the American League last season, will bank on pitching and defense for a more impressive 1959 showing.

Paul Richards Orioles won 12 more games last year than in his inaugural Baltimore season of 1955. A similar improvement this year would bring the Orioles close to the first division which they missed by 15 games last season.

Free Throws, Stalling Rules May Change

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The National Basketball Committee, tinkering with the college and AAU rules again, has changed the code on free throws and made aggressive against stalling.

The committee yesterday decided the first six common fouls in each half shall be one-shot violations. Free throws on succeeding fouls will be awarded under the present one-and-one bonus basis. A player gets a second shot if he makes the first.

The Big Ten used the rule during the past season.

High schools, YMCA and Canadian players will follow the same code except for a slight difference—they will have four one-shot fouls instead of six.

Taking one of actionless or farcical games, the committee said unnecessary stalling by a team shall bring a warning from the game officials. A technical foul can be called if the warning has no effect.

The new rule is aimed at teams which refuse to provide action, the committee explained. Slowdowns will still be all right.

Minor rules changes included: Players other than the shooter shall not touch the ball on the rim of the basket or directly above. Aimed at goal tending.

On double fouls there will be no free throws—just a center jump.

An out-of-bounds ball at the end zone can be thrown in from any position at either end of the court.

The Rare Adventure by BERNARD FERGUSON

THE STORY: Allan and Mollie Large, visiting at Seknou, an island off Tunisia, have taken refuge in the gendarmerie along with other Europeans during a naive uprising. At first Captain Billon believed the Largs had something to do with the uprising, since a relative made Seknou his headquarters 200 years ago, while operating as a pirate.

— XV
Allan told him of the men he had seen on the town gate, and of their bandoliers and rifles. "Have you any idea of what they may have in the way of arms?" he asked.

"We found a dump of rifles and grenades last spring, in a cave on the hill," said Billon, "and we caught a small boat last year heading for Clusium" with 60 rifles and ammunition in it. In other words, we know that there has been smuggling, and we presume there must be a good many weapons about which we have not found."

Brisebarre spoke in English. "About 2 o'clock this afternoon a party of about a dozen armed men came to the airfield buildings. (They are only a couple of huts and a petrol store.) They halted when they saw my two policemen, but they sent in a man holding a white handkerchief above his head to talk. I called to him that if he came any nearer I would shoot, and he went back to his friends. They talked together for a little, and then they went away; but then they began pulling great stones into my runway. I did not think I could stop them, with my two policemen, and soon they were joined by more men, many of whom were armed. By 4 o'clock the runways were quite unusable. I was able to get El Aouina airfield at Tunis on my radio, and warn them that the airfield was now out of action."

Twenty minutes later the sun had dropped, and only a flare of pale blue spread across the heavens behind the hill from south to north. Upon the balcony the sentries peered out into the night, alert and silent. The searchlights were still dark and hooded at each angle of the building. It was Allan who suggested to Brisebarre that they would do well to go and eat. The two stole quietly into the stairway, and went down into the ground floor, here Allan sought out Mollie.

"Are you here, my darling?" he said. "Come and feed your starving husband, and meet our new recruit, Monsieur Brisebarre."

Brisebarre kissed Mollie's hand and was suckly in ecstasies at her French; but in response to Allan's pleading they reverted to English as they passed through into the cookhouse and were each given a large bowl of soup, some bread, and some meat garnished with semolina and lentils.

I'm worried about poor Pere Paleologue," said Mollie, and Brisebarre broke off eating, thunderstruck.

Yes, Paleologue, where is he? Is he not here?

No, he insisted on going back to his church.

The bloody fool! I must say that is dangerous. There are many people here who love Paleologue, and he loves the Seknou gais. But there are many people here who are against Paleologue. For he is like Pere de Foucauld; however much he loves the people, he is French — first and all the time; he is a builder for France, and the Seknougais know it. He is not safe."

"Oh, dear," said Mollie. "One would never know with Paleologue," said Brisebarre, whether he knew there was danger or not. You could never tell with Pere de Foucauld, Paleologue is like Pere de Foucauld in many ways. He too was a cavalry officer."

"Was he?" said Allan and Mollie together; and Allan added, A regular?

Yes; he was at St. Cyr in 1949. In the famous promotion that marched out en casque et gants blancs with their feather plumes and white gloves; the Promotion of the Great Evange, it was called. But he became a priest soon after the war.

Allan took his place by Billon, his elbows on the parapet; there was no moon, and the sky was too dark for their silhouettes to show. One thought had crossed Allan's mind, and he would have consulted Billon about it if he had not dreaded the difficulties and complications of a whispered conversation in French. If Areg or Clusium were the central seat of the conspiracy, and if the only road from Areg to Seknou was the road that lay in darkness below their balcony, what communication could there have been with Seknou since the ending of the Sabbath and the events of the afternoon?

And the thought suddenly struck him that the mere fact that the Gendarmerie telephone was cut did not necessarily mean that the whole system was out of action. Billon! he whispered urgently, and tugged him by the sleeve. Allan felt Billon jump in the dark, exactly as a fish gives a tug on the line, as he tumbled to the full beauty of Allan's idea; and he let lose such a torrent of French that Allan had to beg him to go slow. He explained that both of his wireless operators were junior employees of the F.T.T. and that neither of them was certain to have been a linesman; that the telephone lines ran along the road, and that it should not be impossible, with the equipment in the Gendarmerie, to rig up a tapping set.
